KEATON MCCOY:

I felt inspired to volunteer with Digs today because they're an organization that I really support, and they have a mission that I believe in, which is to help give families a home, not just a house, and also to help to end the cycle of homelessness in Chicago.

KIM HANNAY:

I think, events like this really help spread the awareness to the community about the important work that we're doing at Digs, and it really allows people the opportunity to feel like they can get involved and make a real impact.

ARLA LACH:

Having the opportunity to do things like this with Grant Thornton is amazing to give back to the Chicago community, to have an opportunity for people at all levels in the firm to be able to contribute, feel like they're making a difference and to connect with each other.

BLAKE RASING:

Grant Thornton does a great job giving folks the opportunity to volunteer, so I like to actually be able to show up, wrap the presents, and be here with not only my colleagues, but folks from organizations around the Chicago land area.
